WHAT CAUSED THE BUREAUCRAT?

Rep. Hutton W. Summers has described a perennial condition in such a striking way in the current issue of The Reader's Digest that many readers will think they are finding out something new.

Rep. Summers, respected for his wisdom by all members of congress, points out that bureaucracy is the effect of the decline of local self-government and the rise of a do-everything, super-colossal government-by-remote-control in Washington. Either the states must resume the status of responsible sovereign agencies, he warns, or democracy in the United States is through.

This is the modern version of an issue as old as the United States—the argument over states' rights. It has been twisted and tormented down through the years, revived and buried and worn threadbare. It has been applied and misapplied, but always there was a resolute minority which insisted that the hope of the United States lay in doing everything possible under the circumstances of the moment to strengthen the authority of local government.

Even though the circumstances varied from time to time, their contention always was the same—keep the bulk of the sovereign power close to the people. They did not know about New Dealism and spending and spending and electing and electing. They did not know about the coming policy of having the government support the people, instead of the people supporting the government. But they sensed trouble. Least of all did they foresee that the trouble finally would get serious under an administration backed by the same southern states which fought hardest for states' rights. Rep. Summers, who is from Texas, should write about that sometime, too.

WAR IN GERMANY

The fact that Hitler dares to speak to Germany about reverses in the war is enough to prove that he is still confident of his ability to delude them. The fact he is still alive is proof of something about Germans.

In the weeks and months to come, their delusion will be the key to the length of the war. Delusion is the foundation of German morale, which will crack when most of the people finally comprehend the magnitude of the disaster they face. But the disaster must not seem less than it is.

Hitler's job will be to keep the war just as remote from Germany as possible—by suppression of information, by propaganda and by whatever techniques may be developed to slow down aerial attacks. It is doubly important now to give the Germans no chance to forget that they are destined to reap the whirlwind of their latest attack of mass insanity.

Already the question of occupation of German soil is being discussed in the abstract. It is taken for granted that Germany will surrender while the land fighting still is a safe distance away. But there is no disposition to take for granted the acceptance of its surrender until every German man, woman and child has reason to know personally that German fighting forces were defeated; that all of Germany was defeated; that German superiority is a myth; that Hitler was disposed of as a bloodthirsty criminal; that militarism in Germany is recognized throughout the world as a chronic weakness of that country and will be so regarded with until Germans have earned the right to live among other peoples without being regarded as potential warmakers.

THIS WAS THE AXIS

Rumors and reports of hostility between the original members of the late Axis are coming out of Europe at a rate which leaves no room for doubt about what is happening.

The Germans have changed from an attitude of contempt to a policy of violence. What was the Axis now is a battle between antagonists held together tenuously by a shaky military alliance built on expediency.

The Italians had no illusions about it. Certainly the Germans had none. Illusions were the prerogative of outsiders, who imagined the Axis represented a dynamic force. For years the name terrorized a large part of the world; it was a powerful thing of evil bidding for supreme power in Europe and ultimately in the world.

Yet, the Axis never was anything more than it is now—a coalition of politician-plotters holding populations at bay with terror. There was no real bond between Germans and Italians, just as there is no real bond between Germans and Japanese. Nothing has been held in common but greed. Everything else was window dressing. The hatred now boiling up out of the chaos of defeat reveals the truth. Germans are killing Italians with the same zest they allied to the slaughter of their other victims, and it is ardently to be hoped, for the sake of their satisfaction, that the Italians may be able to hold a similar celebration of the breaking up of an unbecoming "friendship."

RELATIVE SHORTAGES

Final decision on the moot question of drafting family men will be made on a basis of relative shortages. When the question comes up for discussion on the floor of congress—as it now seems bound to come up—military needs will be weighed against production needs.

The plainly evident shortage of manpower in industry will be weighed against an apparent shortage of manpower in the armed forces. It will be necessary for spokesmen representing the army and navy to establish more firmly than they have publicly established so far their claim to all the manpower they need, at the possible expense to the already established need of manpower for industrial production.

In virtually every instance where a similar issue has presented itself, the military need has been placed first, which is as it should be. But congress now seems in a mood to discuss in considerable detail the probable effect of a further curtailment of manpower in war production. It seems likely that a complete airing of the whole situation is going to be the result. If congress decides, after looking into the matter, that military needs justify the drafting of family men, it may be assumed that its doubts have been resolved by the testimony of military officials who have been questioned.

THE STARS SAY :

For Wednesday, September 15

THERE MAY be a sudden reversal of affairs on this day, with the energies and faculties keyed to very decisive accomplishment, spurred by brilliant ideas and highly constructive enterprise, which may assure the substantial support of those in influential positions, both in finance and prestige. It should be a time for inaugurating new projects of major importance with might and main. It may be a time to strike while the iron is hot, with aggressive attack even though objectives are novel, revolutionary or spectacular. It is likely results will be decisive and make place for ingenuity in the public eye. Be circumspect, however, in affiliations, and wary with writings.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for the sudden precipitation of important events, with surprising openings for putting over, with vim and enthusiasm, projects of major significance, especially in connection with community, group or public interest. Those in high places may be ready with capital and friendly aid to promote new, ingenious, or out-of-the-ordinary inventions, business projects or other timely programs or propositions. Seek cooperation with confidence and aggressive initiative, but be cautious in signing all writings. It would be desirable to be discreet in all purely private or social affiliations.

A child born on this day may be inventive, original, ingenious and have some exceptional ideas or talents to attract public recognition and the solid support of those in high places.

We sometimes wonder if we could tell any difference between Badoglio and Mussolini if the former were to occupy the Duce's famous balcony.

Statistics show that there are 3,000 railroad ties, on the average, for each mile of American track. We don't know who took the trouble to count 'em.

One of our exchange paragraphers noted that "famous men like to make quotable remarks at the tomb of Napoleon." Wonder what Hitler would say if he returned there again.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Science Selects Skyfighters

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In the article yesterday we reviewed some of the developments in the field of aviation medicine, particularly selecting pilots on their mental qualifications.

There are, of course, many other

Dr. Clendingen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

developments of aviation medicine which have literally made modern military aviation possible.

One of these, of course, is the oxygen supply. The modern military pilot is exposed to altitudes of 30,000 and 40,000 feet, to temperatures of 66 degrees below zero and to speeds of 500 miles an hour. He could not endure these without artificial methods of help.

Use of Oxygen

The use of oxygen is a fairly simple and obvious method of help, but immense improvements in apparatus and in knowledge of application have been made by research workers. At sea level the total atmospheric pressure is 80 mg. of mercury, the oxygen is approximately 21 per cent, and oxygen pressure of the atmosphere, about 159 mm.

At 10,000 feet the oxygen pressure in the lungs has dropped to 65 mm, and at 20,000 feet it has dropped to 40 mm. Oxygen pressure is what keeps us alive. If it falls below a certain level we become first inefficient, then unconscious, and then we die. The aviator is taught to begin to use oxygen at 10,000 feet. About 15,000 feet it is absolutely necessary for efficiency. At 35,000 feet he is inefficient even when breathing 100 percent oxygen, and above 40,000 feet he will die with 100 per cent oxygen unless he has a pressure cabin or suit.

A related problem is the effect of low barometric pressure per se. At 35,000 feet nitrogen is given off in the blood and gets into the muscles, causing the "bends." It is extremely dangerous.

War Solving Interstate Trucking Difficulties

CHICAGO—War is smoothing one of peacetime transportation's toughest problems—legislative barriers to interstate trucking operations.

To facilitate the movement of war materials on the highway, several states have suspended limitations, either through action of the legislatures or by executive order of the governors, according to the public Administration Clearing House.

New Mexico, Maine and Arkansas have liberalized their laws regarding maximum weights. Oregon has granted non-resident owners and operators the privilege of using state highways without the payment of extra fees. Some, including South Dakota, Utah and Oklahoma, have provided for reciprocal agreements with other states regarding licenses, registration and fees.

Purple Heart Awarded Nearly 25 Years Late

BANGOR, Me.—With military orders for bravery being awarded almost daily to American soldiers, it wasn't unusual when the order of the Purple Heart was conferred upon Julian S. White.

But the citation read: "On account of wounds received in action, July 22, 1918, while serving as a private first class, Company G, 103rd Infantry."

White received the order nearly 25 years after he had won it.

FOOD SUBSIDIES ON DOORSTEP AGAIN AS CONGRESS RETURNS

Milk Especially In Need Of Help, OPA Manager Declares Today

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Congress returned to the capitol today and found right on the doorstep the problem child—food subsidies—it had abandoned in July to go off on vacation.

Chester Bowles, the business man who came in as general manager of the OPA while Congress was away, had the baby dressed differently but he sang the lullaby congress heard before:

If food prices are to be controlled—and reduced to or near the levels of last Sept. 15, which congress wanted—some of the job must be done by subsidies or bonuses.

Milk is the item specifically needing congressional help through subsidy or bonus for the dairy farmer, said Bowles, who also reported a drop in living costs and an attempt to cut them further by a new program to whittle food prices.

After battling itself red in the face over food subsidies earlier in the summer, the senate finally recessed in such haste it abandoned the ban it had placed on subsidies.

At that time the controversial items were meat and butter, but OPA has gone ahead with them, depressing prices by a subsidy of about 350 million dollars obtained from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Bowles' Statement

Congressional feeling toward OPA may have softened in the meantime for before it departed it gave orders that no man lacking business experience should control price-making policies after Aug. 16.

And Bowles, confidently whipping out his report card, said in a lengthy statement last night:

Only eight of OPA's price bosses came under the congressional ban and were being replaced; OPA's much-criticized legal department, as such, will be scrapped; a system of tokens will be substituted for food ration stamps, probably early this winter; no matter what the amount of gasoline allowed on "A" cards hereafter there will be no "legal strings attached"; the public will get more OPA information and facts, "the bitter along with the sweet"; and OPA price panels have orders against "snooping and coercion."

A new OPA program now in the final stages is expected to chop another 23 per cent off living costs by forcing down prices on apples, oranges, onions, potatoes, lard, vegetable oils and peanut butter.

A new ceiling control over winter fruits and vegetables, intended to hold prices 15 per cent below the levels paid last winter, also was announced by the OPA general manager.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

The marimbas were playing when Drew found Gloria in the center of a circle of men, and as he led her out upon the floor he said, "A minute later and I'd have lost you."

She smiled, then, leaning back against his arm, gave herself to the dance. Marvelously light she was; utterly responsive to his faintest lead and to the slow rhythm of the music as, with eyes half-closed, she moved beneath the shaded light. It was as if no other thing existed than this present moment. Tomorrow and yesterday alike were banished—the world had given place to the soft, insistent beat of the marimbas, and she herself was part of the music.

On every side of the room people were watching her, until with a thrill of pride Drew realized that she was dancing with the most beautiful woman there. He looked down at her. What was it about her? Was it that oval face, or the long curve of her eyes? Just what was it that gave him the sense of something perfect, of an exquisite loveliness he found no word for? Something beyond beauty, he told himself. Some quality, some innate simplicity of her very being that evoked friendliness and admiration from everyone—Veraguans, oil men, young and old alike.

The music stopped, and he stood applauding. She gave a little sigh of complete felicity.

"Happy?" he asked.

"Terribly happy."

"You deserve to be. You're wonderful." Then once more to the rising music he felt the slim, strong body swaying in his arms, but at the dance's end a dozen men swooped down on them, and Ray Cutter claimed her.

"I just want to make sure you're not made out of whipped cream and moonlight," he told her, and drew her away.

Drew drifted out to the terrace. It was cooler there, almost deserted. He lighted a cigarette then suddenly his eyes fixed—seated in a deep chair, he saw the familiar figure of Nan Alter, and quietly he moved toward her.

"Not dancing?" he asked.

Startled, she half-rose from her seat, then sank back. "You frightened me! No. After tonight, I don't feel equal to a dance." She glanced to the chair beside her. "Do you know you're the only man in the world who has ever made me afraid? I still have a mark on my shoulder."

"Sorry."

"You're not sorry at all." She laid her head back on the chair. "You found Spud Lowry?"

"Yes."

"And you still think my husband had him kidnapped?"

"Of course. It's nothing new. The Export bunch have played rough with us before."

"But what was his idea?"

"To get Spud out of the country and scuttle my chances of wildcatting. Thanks to your help, he very nearly got away with it."

"Drew?" Her finger touched his arm. "Won't you believe me when I say I had nothing to do with this? I swear it by everything I hold sacred."

"Then why did you ask us to come down there?"

"For something you'll find hard to believe—I want to share in your wildcat venture."

Disbelief shone from his eyes. "That sounds almost funny, coming from—Mrs. Franz Alter."

"She may have winced. 'Wouldn't it be fairer to let me tell you the story? Only two living people know about it—myself and my lawyer. It was his house you came to this evening.'"

"She stopped, but Drew only said, 'Go on.'"

"Perhaps I told you my father made his fortune in oil, here in Veragua? He always said that he wanted to put some of his money back into the country that had been his home for fifty years, and just before he died he divided his estate into two parts. One part he turned over to Franz to administer for me. Franz controls it absolutely. It's hard any longer to think of it as mine."

"The other half my father put into South American and United States bonds, and he left it with one condition—the money could only be used for oil development in this country, and whatever I did had to be approved by his lawyer. It was father's will I started to show you when they made off with Spud."

Nan Alter stopped, then more slowly she went on. "I think father has mistrusted Franz, for he made me promise to tell no one about that sum of money. For years I never thought much about it—Franz was prospering, and I—Nan looked toward the bay—"I suppose I was happy. Franz was everything any woman could ask—and I loved him. It's hard to believe now that those times were ever real—after the death of his younger brother everything changed."

"Who killed him?"

"We never knew. He was in that labor riot in the Argentine. Franz always believed Americans were behind it. At least he's hated Americans ever since. And he seemed suddenly to remember that I was an American." Her eyes looked out over the bay. "Would you find it hard to believe that once there was a time when we were very happy together? I'd give anything I ever had to bring those days back, but they've been getting worse. I had always wanted a baby. If we could have had a child it might have been different, but we never did."

Nan straightened in her chair. "A year after father died, many of the South American bonds defaulted—even the United States bonds dropped—and today there's scarcely thirty thousand dollars left out of what once was a sizable sum. Next year it may be less. There was nothing I could do about it. The trust was very strictly drawn; and in a country like this, where oil development is in the hands of big companies, there seemed no possible way to use those few dollars in the way my father wanted."

"Then you came and talked about wildcatting. It seemed to offer me a chance. I had faith in you—I still have faith in you, maybe because you're a countryman. I talked with my lawyer, and he agreed. Then I phoned you."

Silently intent, Drew missed no movement in the mobile face, no change of overtone in her voice. She seemed honestly frank, yet with each word his doubts increased, and he made no attempt to conceal them.

"I won't even try to guess why you're making this offer," he said. "Is it necessary that you know why?"

"It might help make sense out of your offer."

"Then I will tell you this: In a man-made world you may not know what it means for a woman to be dependent for every penny on someone who happens to be her husband. All Veragua knows that things haven't gone well between Franz and me. They may go worse. They may get so bad I'll want, out of sheer decency, to be self-supporting. I couldn't endure the humiliation of living off my life like a beggar, grateful for every crumb. I just couldn't stand it. Well, this may be my chance. All my life I've been a very useless person, Drew. I've never had children, I've never made a home for anyone. It would give me a deflated ego a boost to have some small part in what you're trying to do. If you fail, I won't be much worse off. And what can you lose?"

"What would you want for all this? Controlling interest?"

"I want nothing but a share if you win and silence if you lose. I want to gamble on you, for I think it's a good gamble."

He tried to read her eyes and gave it up. "What you're saying amounts to this: you're offering to back me in a venture that your husband is trying to prevent. If you lend me that money and he finds it out, he'll kill you."

She nodded. "And you, too, my friend. Is that why you're hesitating?" A faintly ironic note sounded in her voice. "Come. I thought you had courage! You need money, and I offer it without strings." She smiled at him.

"Why don't you say yes?"

"I couldn't, even if I wanted. Spud is in on this, too." Drew looked up, and when he spoke his voice was very earnest.

"I can't entirely trust you, Mrs. Alter. It's a little hard for me to get the picture of a woman as intelligent as you are—an American woman—reconciling yourself to the work your husband is doing here in South America."

"We never talk about his work." "That may be. But his mission here is no secret to Diaz or to any of the Veraguan officials. Your husband was sent here as a representative of his government to do two things: force the American companies out from South America, and make every country south of the Rio Grande economically dependent on Europe."

"But that's not war?"

Drew laughed. "Isn't it? It's the kind of war that, if your Fifth Column is strong enough, is more effective and more deadly than bayonets and machine guns ever be. To weaken every South American republic, isolate the United States, create innocent-looking landing fields that can be turned overnight into bombing bases—and you don't call that war?"

She leaned toward him. "Drew," she said, "tell me the truth—do you actually believe I am working with Franz to bring these things about—against my own country?"

"He looked at her through a long silence. 'I don't know what to believe,' he said at last."

She seemed to draw within herself. "I suppose it's one of life's ironies that the only man I want to trust me—won't." She rose, and in spite of the warm night she shivered, then with a little nod went inside the club.

Expert Sees U. S.

Supply of Fats, Oils As Adequate

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal.—The United States is still as well supplied with fats as it has ever been, according to Dr. Karl Brandt, economist in the Stanford Food Research Institute.

Dr. Brandt served as economic adviser to Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture, in the summer of 1942 and assisted him in shaping United States war policy for fats and oils.

He was also at one time economic food adviser to the German government.

Despite America's present supply of fats and oils, Dr. Brandt advocates in a pamphlet just published by the Institute, the continued rationing of them as insurance against the hazards of a new crop.

"The United States is still as well supplied with fats and oils as it has ever been and much better off than Europe," he states.

"Although German imports have been sharply cut," he adds, "only general deterioration of her economic and military situation, with faltering of transportation and distribution, would cause a food-fat crisis there."

"With the exception perhaps of Portugal, no country had maintained its pre-war level of fats consumption. Denmark and Holland are the best supplied, while Poland is the worst."

"British rations are 63 per cent off normal."

"Although the United States was not prepared for a fats shortage, remarkable adjustments were made."

"Brazil and Argentina have taken the position lost by Asia as our chief foreign fats suppliers, but are handicapped by the shortage of ships."

"Argentina burns 1,500,000 tons of linseed as fuel in her locomotives annually."

THESE YANKS MADE FULL CONTRIBUTION TO VICTORY

THIS PHOTO ISN'T PRETTY, but it is sadly real. American paratroopers are pictured above as they were cut down by Axis gunfire in Sicily. To those who think the war is becoming merely a victory parade, it should prove that the war will be won only at the price of lives. The picture has just been released from the war department's files. U. S. Army Signal Corps photo. (International)

Yanks Overseas Give Their Christmas Gift Preferences

No more misfit sweaters, mangled cakes or burnt-wood table tennis sets for Yanks overseas. The boys have spoken up and told the folks back home what they want for Christmas, and, with emphasis, what they DON'T want.

A survey just completed by the Office of War Information brings first-hand information from the men on our fighting fronts.

The boys don't want food—they get plenty where they are. Also on the thumbs-down list are cigarettes (they can buy them at the PX), commercial packages of goodies, elaborate shaving kits and anything bulky.

From all theaters of war, there is unanimous opinion on the two things most desired: first, a long, newsy letter from home; second, recent photographs of sweetheart, wife or family in small, folding frames.

Relatives and friends also are asked to avoid duplication of gifts. Some soldiers are pretty bitter about receiving six identical sewing kits, or four subscriptions to the same magazine.

Specific lists of gift preferences from the various theaters of war follow:

European Theater: Leather gloves, fountain pens, identification bracelets, OD socks, handkerchiefs and lightweight shirts. Especially requested are women's sheer stockings and cosmetics, which make welcome gifts when soldiers are invited out.

Sicily: Wrist watches (shockproof and waterproof), fountain pens, soap, toilet articles and such as fingernail scissors and razor blades, subscriptions to pocket-size magazines.

Middle East: Film and cameras, good cigars and pipes, cigarette lighters. (When sending film remember that the postoffice won't accept it unless it is in original package, with seal unbroken.)

Australia: Cigarette lighters with extra flints and wicks, fountain pens that won't leak at high altitudes.

writing pads, wrist watches, pocket-size books, good swimming trunks (Christmas is the hottest season of the year in Australia.)

China-Burma-India: Reading material, good razor blades, compact shaving kits, combs, smoking tobacco, cigars, socks and underwear, cigarette lighters, pen and pencil sets.

Alutians: Luxury items such as wrist watches, radios (if you can find one and it weighs less than five pounds), rings, fountain pens, cigarette lighters, pipes and tobacco, cameras and film, hunting knives, fishing equipment.

Hawaii: Cigarette lighters that light in the wind, cigars, watches, battery radios, trench knives, and pocket-size magazines.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and Canal Zone: Money orders, watches, cameras and film, playing cards, flashlights, small steel mirrors, writing paper, nail clippers, identification bracelets or rings.

Four Turtles Explain Mystery of Pet's Growth

LYONS, Kas.—Paul Jones tells about the man whose wife wanted "one of those itty bitty turtles."

He bought one and gave it to her but he also purchased four others, graduating in size. After a few days he secretly substituted a little larger turtle for the first one. His wife was happy at the growth of her pet.

The husband kept on with the substitutions and the unsuspecting wife became elated at her healthy, fast-growing turtle. Then the man reversed the process and his wife almost went crazy trying to keep her pet from withering away. Finally he let her in on the joke.

Jail Houses Library

SOUTH PARIS, Me.—To borrow books in this village you have to go to jail. For 67 years prior to its conversion, the Hamlin Memorial library was Oxford county's Old Stone Jail. Except for minor changes in the roof and removal of the cells, the building has undergone no alterations. The entrance is guarded by a heavy iron door and still there is the door of the "solitary" cell.

Use your War Bonds . . . after Victory . . . to buy the gas range or refrigerator you've always wanted to own

People say: "Yes, there's plenty of money and jobs now—but what about after the war? How can Business assure employment? Won't there be another depression? Won't the Government have to 'spend and spend' again?"

What do you honestly think about it yourself? Don't you believe that American industry . . . if given the chance . . . could do as brilliant a job in peace as it is now doing in war? Don't you believe that the average manufacturing plant could start making peacetime products again and bring back all its old workers if it had orders? Don't you believe that those orders could be assured if people—after this war—had the money to put down for things they want to own?

War Bonds may well prove to be the answer to this whole problem of postwar employment for you, your sister's boy and the boy down the street who's now in the Air Corps.

Back up Uncle Sam, and your own son, husband or sweetheart, by buying all the War Bonds you can. That's for victory—now. Later they will be a backlog for the prosperity of your own family and a key to a richer enjoyment of living.

Several Substitute Teachers Appointed For Salem Schools

Substitute instructors are playing an important role in filling the war-created gaps in the teacher roster of the Salem public schools, a report by Supt. E. S. Kerr at the board of education meeting Monday night indicated.

Ten appointments of substitute teachers were approved by the board upon the superintendent's recommendation.

Announcement was made of the partial withdrawal of Miss Lillian Schroeder, who has been health nurse, to accept a position with the Columbiana County Public Health League.

Since Miss Schroeder will be away to teach only part time this year, Mrs. Arthur Brian was employed as a substitute school nurse on a monthly basis.

An approval also was given to the transfer of Miss Winifred Ospek from the South Street building to the high school where she will take over the English and dramatic duties previously taught by Miss Alpha Combs. Miss Combs resigned early in the summer to take up Red Cross field work.

Miss Ospek, who will direct the class play at the high school, has been a grade school teacher here for six years. She is a Mount Union college graduate.

Substitute teacher appointments, in addition to Mrs. Brian, include: Mrs. Irene Mathews, biology at the high school.

Alton Allen, general science, high school.

Mrs. Lawrence Beardmore, fourth grade, Reilly.

Mrs. Edith Goodman, sixth grade, Prospect.

Mrs. Nellie Horton, fourth grade, Fourth Street.

Mrs. J. M. Kelley, third grade, Reilly.

Mrs. Clyde McFeeley, second grade, Fourth Street.

Holland Cameron, trade class coordinator, is assisting in this work.

Board members approved entering into a contract with the state board for vocational education for the 1943-44 school year at an amount not to exceed $2,400.

Cites County Statistics On Juvenile Delinquency

COLUMBIANA, Sept. 14.—Juvenile Delinquency was the theme used Monday evening at the meeting of the Columbiana Rotary club at Valley Golf club, by the speaker, Rev. Charles C. Hanks, East Liverpool.

Rev. Hanks, now a county probation officer, cited numerous cases that have come to his attention, quoting statistics based on over 900 cases in this county.

The average age of youth involved in various crimes in this county that are handled in juvenile court, where the age limit is 18, is only 14½ years. It has been found that families having five children produce the most criminals.

The four major causes of delinquency are: poverty, broken homes, lack of religious training and environment.

Body Basis Styles Demand of Women A Body Beautiful

By DOROTHY ROE

This is wartime, Mrs. Brown. You don't need the ruffles on that gown.

You hid your neckline with frills before. But you can't hide it thus any more.

We're plunk in the middle of a new era of fashion, and it's name is L-83, which is government code for slim, straight and narrow.

In case you've been wondering about the meaning of that apparently mystic symbol, it's simply the number of the original government order restricting the fabric used in clothes. But, so sweeping have been its results, that it is now being used to describe the whole current cycle of fashion.

There's not an extra inch of fabric in the new streamlined models, no peplums, tunics or drapery to conceal those bulges. Line is the all-important theme, and the line is straight.

For slim figures, the new mode is flattering. For the not-so-slim there is just one course of action: make over the figure to fit the clothes, by means of diet, exercise and a good girdle.

Designers this fall have gone far beyond the official regulations of the "body basic," which is another government tag for the slim silhouette. In practically all the important collections, skirts are narrower than required, jackets shorter, lines straighter.

Trimming, instead of being applied in the form of ruffles and flounces, more often is used in surface ornamentation such as appliques, embroidery and braid, which add interest but no inches.

Some designers simulate peplums and tucks by means of appliques, braid, or in practically all the important collections, skirts are narrower than required, jackets shorter, lines straighter.

Once you get over your yen for fluffy ruffles, you're going to like these new L-83 clothes. They're slim and functional, and there's no nonsense about them. They depend for effectiveness on skillful cut and handsome fabrics.

Special allowances have been made for "cushy" figures—but who wants an outside figure in this day when even kitchen stoves are streamlined?

Smart girls this year are cutting down on pounds as well as purchases.

2 BILLION IN THIRD LOAN QUOTA ASSURED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—With $2,369,000,000 already in the till treasury officials expressed confidence today that the full $15,000,000,000 quota for the Third War Loan would be met.

On the basis of these three-day totals, Delaware led the nation on a percentage basis. Its $14,000,000 in sales represented 28 per cent of its quota. New York with $1,120,000,000 or 24 per cent was second and North Carolina, accounting for 16 per cent of its quota with $24,000,000 in sales, was third.

The treasury did not provide totals for other states.

Ferguson Planning District Meetings

COLUMBUS, Sept. 14.—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson is planning to hold a series of county and district meetings throughout Ohio to spur enthusiasm among Buckeye Democrats.

He announced his intention yesterday at his informal state convention to demand more federal patronage for Ohio party members. Ferguson, only Democrat to hold a major elective state office, assailed federal civil service in support of his charge that Ohio Democrats were not getting their share of federal appointments.

LET'S GO!

HERE'S THAT INVASION YOU WANTED!

Now, let's get things straight.

"You don't know who I am. Maybe I'm your son, or brother, or buddy—maybe not. But I am the soldier who'll get the equipment your particular Bonds will buy.

"Do you get a new suit, or a permanent wave, or whatever it is you're looking to spend money on... or will you help pay for the tools to do this job for you?

"O.K. then—show me—Buy Bonds to the limit!"

You're in this INVASION. It's as simple as that.

Uncle Sam needs 15 billion dollars this month to pay for this INVASION...and there's no easy way out. If it's not a sacrifice, you're not doing your part. 10 per cent isn't enough—15 per cent isn't enough. Nothing is enough but every last cent you can turn into fighting War Bonds.

You're not giving, American—you're investing.

Investing in freedom, investing in a clear conscience, investing for future security.

And it's the soundest investment anyone ever made.

You'll have the money to educate your children, build your home, buy a car, when the war is won.

The least every American can do to put this over is to buy an extra $100 Bond in September. But that's the least—you can be counted on to do your level best, can't you? Get those War Bonds now—buy them out of income, buy them with idle, accumulated money—but buy all you can—and be glad to be an American!

Coast Grid Future Clouded

BY RUSS NEWLAND
AP Features
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—College football will be played on far western grids this fall but the future of the Pacific Coast conference is clouded.
War conditions already have jaded two members loose from the 10-school circuit. The University of Montana abandoned football plans in August and Stanford followed suit soon after.
Army reservists are stationed at Montana and Stanford and the Army has turned thumbs down on intercollegiate football for its trainees.

SECOND OF A SERIES

The University of Oregon, Washington State and Oregon State colleges are in the same category. Without the hope of the Army students they view the forthcoming season with downright pessimism. Some of their best players have been transferred to schools with Navy programs.
In contrast the outlook is bright at the conference schools selected to train Navy reservists. The universities of Southern California and Washington are deep in talent, with some players drained from rival members under the Navy program.

"PIGSKIN PREVIEWS"

With the second wartime football season getting underway shortly, all eyes are turned to the college grids. What is the outlook for the pigskin sport? Who are the possible team champions and individual stars?
Turn to our sports page today and start "PIGSKIN PREVIEWS." Ace AP sports writers from every section of the country tell you what to expect in the popular fall sport.

gram set-up or retained for similar reasons.

Southern Cal Has Its Day

Southern California, for instance, will have the services of Joe Day, outstanding fullback transferred from Oregon State college. He has had three years' college experience. Other Trojan backfield stars will include holdovers Mickey McCardie, Howard Callahan, Jackie Fellows and Louie Futrell, assignees from Fresno State college.

Washington's impressive squad includes four veteran backs, Sam Robinson, Bob Erickson, Pete Suck and Neil Brooks, and Jay Stoves, a transferee from Washington State college.

ington State college. Stoves was one of the best fullbacks in the conference last year.

The universities of California (Berkeley), California at Los Angeles and Idaho also are Navy designated training centers and will profit in manpower by the shifting of reservists. The California Bears, therefore, will use four former Stanford players, including Bill Joslyn, first class backfielder. UCLA gained Stanford's first string quarterback, Bob Andrews, to add to such good holdover ball huggers as Everett Riddle and Don Malmberg.

Two Sections

The divergent Army and Navy views on intercollegiate athletic competition strengthened half the conference and weakened the other half. The weaker half, already minus Montana and Stanford, may find the going too tough to play out the season.

To cut down travel as much as possible, the conference voted to divide into northern and southern sections this year, with teams in the two sections playing a number of home and home games. The divisional champions are scheduled to meet for the conference title.

forces had nearly completed encirclement of the German garrison and already had captured railway stations on the outskirts of the town.

Germans Pay Heavily
Other Russian forces were storming ahead toward Kiev and the Dnieper river on sectors of the front which extended southward from Bryansk to the Sea of Azov and the gateway to the Crimea, the Moscow war bulletin disclosed.

The hard-pressed Nazi reported to have paid heavily for their failure to advance. Upward of 2,000 German troops were slain when Soviet spearheads stormed Bryansk, the Russians declared.

Many prisoners were taken in this operation, and the Germans abandoned huge quantities of war supplies in their retreat to the high west bank of the Dnieper, the Moscow war bulletin added.

Capture of Bryansk opens the way for a drive on White Russia, 75 miles to the west.

ALLIES GIVE WAY IN BLOODY BATTLE

German Counter Attack on Salerno Bridgehead Gaining Ground

lied planes including every type from A-39 invaders to Flying Fortresses attacked Nazi bases and convoys, and 10 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday.

The Allied communique gave no details of the situation at Salerno, saying merely:

"Heavy fighting continues on the Fifth Army front. The Germans are counter-attacking desperately and at certain points have regained some of the ground taken by us."

British Advance
The Eighth Army advanced approximately 10 miles up the west coast of Italy to reach Cosenza, 90 miles from Reggio Di Calabria and at about the center of the arch of the Italian foot. From there the British were 130 air miles from the Fifth Army in the Salerno sector.

On the heel of the boot other British forces were expanding their holdings out of Taranto and Brindisi.

One column was at Bari, 65 miles north of Brindisi on the Adriatic, and another, cutting diagonally across the heel from Taranto, was at Gioia, about midway between the naval base and Bari.

The American and British troops composing Clark's army who were landed on the coastal plain south of Salerno were fighting their way desperately toward the mountains from which the Germans were pouring down a murderous fire on the invasion beaches.

Germans Use Best Units
"The fighting is extremely heavy and it certainly is the bitterest land fighting encountered by an Allied landing force in this war," a military officer said.

The reconstituted Hermann Goering division, the same one which gave the Americans and British so much trouble in Northern Tunisia near Medjez El Bab and in Sicily and the 15th and 16th Armored divisions, among the best the Germans have, were contesting the American advance.

Heavy Allied air activity was reported over all of Southern Italy with 10 German aircraft destroyed over the battle area.

Yesterday, the communique said Allied heavy, medium and light bombers attacked road and railway junctions at Torre Del Greco and Pompei in the Bay of Naples and enemy installations southeast of Salerno. Roads near Pompei were again attacked last night.

The previous night road junctions, railways and enemy transport in the Potenza and Auletta areas were blasted by medium and light bombers.

In addition to the 10 enemy planes reported destroyed by Allied fighters yesterday three more were listed as shot down last night.

Allied losses in all these operations were put at three planes.

The group signed the petition supporting the Bryson bill. The lesson subject was "Narcotics" and papers were read by Mrs. William Read, Mrs. William Robinson, Mrs. W. C. Eyster and Mrs. T. B. Hyland. The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

But we shall have to dig much deeper than that, because the real and perpetual mainspring of German aggression is Prussian militarism. We must eliminate the Prussian war lords as well—and they won't be hard to name.

There's a very similar situation in Japan. General Tojo. There militarism rules. You and the other militarists are guilty of multiple aggression and untold atrocities. We're going to get you, Tojo, and your co-murderers.

As for Italy, Signor Soft Underbelly, we want you and a few other cowardly gangsters like your son-in-law, Count Ciano. That's not asking much.

A most satisfactory solution of the problem (if any) growing out of your elimination from society would be to hold Allied courts martial as fast as you criminals are rounded up. We want no Roman holiday made of your trials—no theatricals, no fuss or feathers, no piddling about. We need dignified and speedy courts martial which will send you all to your just punishment—whatever that may be.

Embezzlement Charge

TOLEDO, Sept. 14.—John Elbert Welsh, 35, Ada, charged with the embezzlement of approximately $15,000 from an Ada bank, entered a plea of innocence when arraigned before Federal Judge Frank L. Kloebe here today.

SUBMARINE'S LOSS REPORTED BY NAVY

Grenadier, Two Submarine Chasers Lost, Latter In Mediterranean

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Loss of the submarine Grenadier and two submarine chasers was reported by the Navy today.

The communique also told of a Japanese raid Sunday night on the United States base on Funafuti island in the Ellice group in which one enemy plane was shot down and little damage was caused.

The Grenadier, reported overdue and presumed lost, apparently was one of the American submarines which have been inflicting heavy damage on Japanese submarines which have been inflicting heavy damage on Japanese supply lines throughout the Pacific.

The navy gave no indication of where the submarine made its last patrol.

The subchasers 694 and 939 went down in the Mediterranean area as a result of enemy bombing. The attack, the navy said, was made Aug. 23, but no additional details were disclosed.

Built at Portsmouth, N. H., the two-year-old grenadier carried a crew of approximately 65 men. She was the 12th submarine lost since the war started. The most recent was the Pickerel, reported overdue and presumed lost on Aug. 15.
